

TEACHERS!

Bring to life a young girl and her family who lived during the economic upheaval that North Carolina faced 100 years ago with the serialized story...

Behind the High Board Fence

Starting DATE: <INSERT DATE> • Ending DATE: <INSERT DATE>

In her 80s, after a stroke disables her right hand, with her left hand, Helen Sharp writes what she remembers of her childhood and leaves those stories for her daughter, Helen Marley. Marley weaves her mother's recollections into Behind the High Board Fence.

Sharp turns 10 years old in 1911. She lives in a town where streetcars and railroads prove vital to transportation and fuel the city's growth. Textiles and tobacco take root. Different from today, electricity does not serve the Sharps' home, so the family must wash clothes by hand. Family members face crippling illness and injury and must adjust to new ways of earning a living. Much like today, the Sharps celebrate holidays and special occasions, negotiate with siblings, and plan for the future.

Each of the 16 chapters includes a realistic drawing, background information about North Carolina, a newspaper activity and a link to a website that provides a study guide based on Bloom's taxonomy, revised, 27 graphic organizers and additional resources for research.

To receive newspapers for use in your classroom and this story, complete the following order form and return it to your NIE program. The story may also appear in e-Editions that you order for use in your classroom.

Contact at your newspaper: <INSERT NAME, EMAIL ADDRESS, PHONE, MAILING ADDRESS>

___ I wish to order ___ newspapers on each of the 16 days when the newspaper publishes the story: < INSERT ALL DATES >

___ I understand that the classroom newspapers cost ___ (price per newspaper) X ___ (no. of newspapers per delivery) X 16 weeks (no. of deliveries) = _____ (TOTAL COST)

Name _____

School _____

School address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____